

Braidyn Denzer

1/27

Creative coding

Randy Pausch's last lecture had a pretty good impact on me from the start of his lecture when he told the viewers about his terminal illness. This part really stood out to me because it seemed he had accepted it and was just trying his best to stay positive. He started by telling us in a humorous and funny way even through the severity of the situation. It really shows what kind of person he is all the way to the end, a cheerful and inspiring person. One message I really identified with him was when he said fulfill your childhood dreams. This really stuck out to me due to the fact that, k your only young once, fufuil what you want to in those years, because when you get older you have far more obligations to attend too then when your a younger student. Randy Pauchs Last lecture was really deep and informative for me. I enjoyed it alot and really agree and understand with alot of his statements.